On April 16, a senior journalist from Miami.com came to Ruth K. Broad for an exclusive interview hosted by the Journalism Team. Sara Liss is a “food writer” who used to work for the Time Out Istanbul magazine and then the Associated Press in Israel. Sara mentions that she worked for the Associated Press during the Iraq War. While working there, she had to travel with a face mask just in case chemical gases were in use. After leaving the Associated Press, she returned to school to study journalism. When she finished her studies, she started working for Urban Daddy for about five years as an editor. While working for Urban Daddy, she started writing her own blog about food and, later on, her blog was noticed by an editor in New York. Now, she has a column that gets picked up by the Miami Herald Tropical Life section, which talks about life in Florida. Sara started a supper club and dabbled in teaching. Sara Liss stated “One thing AP taught me is you can’t be precious about your words”. Sara Liss has proved that though journalism is a tough path to take, it is a rewarding and amazing experience.

5th Grade's Scott Rakow Adventure

The 5th graders went on the end of the year field trip to the Scott Rakow Youth Center. The activities they could play were bowling, basketball, and ice skating. There was also a game room with arcade games and table games. Even though the bus drive was a little rough, because there was bad air conditioning, most people loved the field trip, giving an average of 9.5 out of 10. The kids enjoyed the field trip because they had a lot of activities to participate in and they were able to spend time with their friends. Some students commented that they would've liked to go to the pool if they were allowed to. A lot of people preferred to be on the cold ice skating rink. Besides spending time in ice skating rink, they also had fun at the bowling alley. Clementina Ramirez said "I enjoyed the freedom that we had during the field trip"

Admiring Architecture

The Upper Academy Art elective was able to go on a field trip to the Biltmore Hotel and the Coral Gables Museum. Many of the Art students who also enjoy photography had a chance to take photos of the interesting architecture and interior of the Biltmore Hotel. One student from the art elective has an interest in architecture, and Lauren Hensfeld said "that the architecture at the Biltmore Hotel inspired her." The museum had intriguing exhibits, sculptures and mosaics. At the museum there was an exhibit which was sculpted to look like a beehive. The exhibit even had honey packets to make it smell like a beehive and there were bee noises playing so the exhibit seemed real. The art students had a delightful time during the field trip. Mandy Fuller said the field trip was a great experience.

Don't Stop the Music..

On May 2nd, RKBBH's band and a few students from Sign Language performed in the North Miami Beach Bandshell. The band played the pledge of allegiance, while the three girls signed to the words. In the performance hall, there were different treats like cotton candy and popcorn. Different schools also performed, doing different activities such as, dancing and singing.

In addition, on May 24, Mr. Rodriguez and Mr. B's classes played in their final concert of the year, the Spring Concert. Something that made the band students super happy was the fact they got new uniforms. Not only did the performers play their instruments, they added special effects by clapping and stomping their feet. It was the show of the year!

Ready Player One is a movie based off of an appalling book. Ready Player One is about people who live in the year of 2045 and hate society. A man named James Donovan Halliday creates a Virtual Reality system combined with a Virtual Reality chat, to create something called the Oasis. Right before Halliday dies, he puts three keys all over the Oasis. If you find all three keys, you will win an egg called the Easter Egg. If you get the Easter Egg, you achieve the capability to control the Oasis and 1.5 trillion dollars. The evil corporation named IOI wants to make the Oasis a very monstrous place. The good guys have to team up and beat the IOI. The movie had really well produced action scenes including one of the best fight scenes I have ever seen with the Iron Giant and Godzilla. The movie was, in my opinion, well thought out and had quite a few witty remarks. If I were to rate this movie, I would give it a 7.7 out of 10.

Science Bowl

Ms. Cendoya's Science Bowl winner was Lucio Portillo, who was matched against competent opponents. His classmates all studied but he was challenged mostly by Madison Newman. Although Lucio didn't study, and his opponents did, Lucio stated that he was surprised by a couple words and wasn't sure he would win. When he won he stated that Piccolo's Pizza was his choice of food as his reward.
